The Naitonal Intelligencer, October 24, 1861 Obituary
The venerable Asbury Dickins, late Secretary of the Senate, died at his residence in this city yesterday morning. Mr. D. was, we believe a native of North Carolina, but removed in early life to Philadelphia. He afterwards spent several years in Europe. Returning to America he filled a post in the Treasury Department under Secretary Crawford with signal usefulness. Subsequently he served with equal credit as chief clerk in the Department of State, under Secretaries Van Buren and Forsyth. In 1836 he was elected Secretary of the Senate of the United States, which respectable and confidential office he filled with great ability and universal approval down to the extra session of the present year. In all the stations which he occupied his faithfulness, talents and gentlemanly bearing won the high respect of his superiors and of all others who knew him.
The Huntress, November 30, 1839 Officers, Clerks and Messengers in the Capitol of the United States Senate
Mr. Asbury Dickins, the present Secretary, who was elected to fill the place of Mr. Lowry, is a very different man, and has nothing to do with tracts. He is a man of pleasant, mild manners, and has a countenance every way unlike toe black, long, demon visage of his predecessor, who never gave a cent to the poor in his life, to our knowledge.

The National Intelligencer, August 2, 1849

We learn from the Alexandria Gazette that a most lamentable accident occurred on Monday evening last, in Fairfax county, near the residence of David Fitzhugh, Esq., about ten miles from Alexandria. The horses attached to a spring wagon, in which Mrs. M.A. Fitzhugh, Miss Dickins, and two other ladies were riding, took fright and ran off with great fury. The wagon was dashed against a tree, and broken to pieces. Miss Dickins, about twelve years of age, a most interesting girl, daughter of Francis A. Dickins, Esq. of this city, was so severely injured that she died in an hour or two after the accident. Mrs. Fitzhugh was very much injured, but it is hoped, from the report of the physicians, that her wounds are not dangerous. Another of the ladies had her arms shattered, and in other respects was much bruised; and the other young lady was slightly injured. Such was the violence of the concussion of the wagon against the tree, that it is a wonder the whole party were not killed. This melancholy accident is deeply regretted in the whole neighborhood.
