McNeill, Daniel The Evening Star, December 1, 1912, p. 2 Fall Down Steps Fatal Daniel McNeil, Insurance Solicitor, Found Dead at 905 H Street Northwest Daniel McNeil an insurance solicitor, was instantly killed late last night by falling down the back stairs of the house in which he was living at 905 H street northwest. When the body was discovered at the bottom of the stairs by W.C. Cowjill, the proprietor of the house, McNeil's head was bent under him, his neck evidently broken by striking against the wall at the bottom of the steps. McNeill came here from Cincinnati six months ago, separating from his wife and family, the police say. One of his daughters visited hi three days ago, and since that time, people in the house say, McNeil has seemed very morose and depressed. Headquarters Detective Howlett went to the house as soon as the accident was reported. The hall on the second floor of the house is a long corridor, with several doors and the back stairs opening off it. Detective Howlett said that he thought McNeil, in feeling his way along the corridor, which was in darkness, came to the head of the stairs, missed his footing, and fell. The stairs are carpeted, and no one in the house heard the fall. McNeil's relatives will be notified of his death and the body probably will be sent to Cincinnati for burial.	d. 30 Nov 1912		R50/284

McNeill, Gen. John The National Intelligencer, February 25, 1850 Obituary Died, on Saturday afternoon last, at the Irving Hotel, in this city, General John McNeil, a distinguished officer of the War of 1812. His arrival from Boston, where he is Surveyor of the Port, as but just announced to us when we were apprised of his death. This was sudden and unexpected to us, though we since learn that he has long been declining, and suffered much from a painful and protracted illness. He was born in Hillsborough, New Hampshire, and at the time of his death was in the 66th year of his age. In 1812 he entered the army as a captain of infantry, and served with great distinction in that second war of independence. In 1814 he belonged to the first brigade, commanded by Gen. Scott, which opened a most glorious career of arms, in crossing the Niagara Straits and encountering the British veterans of the peninsular war. At the battle of Chippewa McNeil commanded the advance of Scott's brigade, the 11th regiment, Col. Campbell having been wounded in the early part of the action. In crossing the creek the leading regiment of the column encountered a most murderous fire, by which, in a few moments forty men were cut down. He	d. 23 Feb 1850	66 yrs.	R53/248 advanced steadily on, with Jesup's regiment next, and at the distance of thirty paces from the enemy they deployed into line; McNeil, of herculean frame and stentorian voice, called aloud, "Give it to them--take vengeance on them, boys." And again, at the battle of Bridgewater, he had the honor to lead the celebrated Scott's brigade into action, in the face of a British battery of nine guns. In less than an hour the whole brigade was literally cut to pieces. As Ripley and Portel's brigades came into action McNeil redoubled his energies; when the 22d infantry broke, (its Colonel, Brady, having fallen,) McNeil rallied and reformed it. At this period of the action his horse was killed by a cannon ball and himself wounded in both legs by cannister shot, a six-ounce ball passing directly through his right knee. At the close of the war he was retained in the army, and served on the Lakes and the Mississippi till 1829, when he was appointed a commissioner to negotiate with the Sac and Fox Indians. At the conclusion of his mission he repaired to Washington, and subsequently resigned his appointment in the army, but only to serve his country in a civil capacity. He was appointed Surveyor of the Port of Boston, which office he filled till the day of his death.

The funeral of the deceased will take place on Tuesday afternoon; of the hour due notice will be given to the public.
