Judge Mulowny Dies at Residence

Member of Local Bar Served for Many Years as Assistant U.S. Attorney

Alexander Richmond Mulowny, prominent member of the local bar, former judge of the Police Court and for many years assistant United States attorney for the District of Columbia, died at 6 o'clock last night at his residence, 6300 Connecticut avenue.

Judge Mulowny, who was 65 years of age, was born in Richmond, Va., August 29, 1865, the son of John F. Mulowny, who was in the United States consular service. Coming to this city at an early age, Judge Mulowny attended the public schools and law school. He was also a student of architecture. In the practice of law, Judge Mulowny soon attracted attention. It was not long before he was tendered and accepted an appointment as assistant United States attorney. As such he was assigned to take charge of the prosecution of all United States cases in the Police Court and as such earned an enviable reputation. He had an unusually long term of service, 14 years. Toward the end he was transferred to the main office and prepared all the indictments after "true bills" had been decided on by the grand jury.

He was selected by the then President of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt, October 5, 1905, to be one of the two judges of the Police Court. His long service as prosecuting attorney in the court and his judgment of human nature eminently fitted him for the position on the bench.

After serving until October, 1918--13 years--Judge Mulowny left the bench and resumed private practice, in which he was engaged until his death. He underwent a surgical operation last June, from which he did not recover.

Surviving Judge Mulowny are his wife, who was Miss Marie Thomas, and one daughter, Miss Kathryn Mulowny. Judge Mulowny was active as a member of the Bar Association of the District of Columbia and was a member of B.B. French Lodge, No. 15, F.A.A.M.

Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed.

Judicial notice of the death of Judge Mulowny was taken today by Justice Alfred A. Wheat, presiding in the District Supreme Court, by directing that the minutes of the court show an adjournment out of respect to the deceased jurist.

Judge Mulowny's death was called to the attention of the court by Attorney D. Edward Clarke, who spoke briefly of the legal ability and attainments of the deceased and asked that the usual notice of adjournment be made on the records of the court.

In granting the motion, Justice Wheat said that before he had gone to practice in New York he knew Judge Mulowny and admired him. He expressed his sincere sorrow at the death of the former judge.

Also out of respect to the memory of Judge Mulowny, judges of Police Court announced that various branches would adjourn early today as soon as jail cases were disposed of.

Junior Judge, Police Court

Judge Alexander Richmond Mulloony, the junior member of the Police Court bench, is a trained lawyer, possessed of a ripe judgment, quick perception and a judge of human nature that enables him to easily determine the truth and falsity of the great bulk of evidence that daily comes before him for determination. His legal decisions are always sound and tempered with justice. He is no respecter of persons by reason of social, financial or political status, weighing every case that comes up before him in the scales of justice that leaves no criticism possible.

A short time after reaching his majority he was appointed Assistant United States District Attorney for the Police Court, in which position he served with marked ability for a number of years, until he was promoted to the bench. He is a native of Richmond, Va., where he was born August 24, 1864, being now 44 years old. He comes from a pure strain of old Irish stock that traces its ancestry back through many centuries. His father was a son of Commodore Mulloony of the United States Navy; his mother in her girlhood days was the belle of Washington. His father and grandfather were intimate personal friends of Daniel Webster, and on the occasion of his father's marriage the bridal party was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Webster at their bridal dinner in the Webster home, that stood on the east half of the present site of the Police Court D and Sixth streets northwest, then the most fashionable section of the city. Webster's home at that time was one of the finest in the city and the center of literary, art, diplomacy and statesmanship sets of the day.

Judge Mulloony some years ago organized the Irish Legation, composed of citizens of the District of Irish ancestry who could trace their lineage to the dim distance of the greatness of the Emerald Isle when it was governed by the old line of Irish kings. This organization meets annually on Ireland's Patron Saint's day--March 17--to discuss a royal Irish dinner, genealogy of the race and their line of ancestry. He is prominently identified with the Masonic Order, being a member of Benjamin B. French Lodge, Columbia Commandery, Knights Templar, Washington Royal Arch. In addition to this, he is active in athletics as a member of the Columbia Athletic Association. In civic matters he takes a lively interest, being a member of the Business Men's Associations of this city.

He was educated in the public schools of this city and received his legal education at the National University of Law, from which he graduated in 1887 with the degree of B.L. He was appointed judge of the Police Court by President Roosevelt December 21, 1905, succeeding Judge Scott, who had died in office.

Personally Judge Mulloony is a genial young man, standing high with the bench and bar of the District, and enjoying the confidence and friendship of a host of friends in all walks of life, who pronounce him a royal fellow. On average he hears 10,000 cases annually.

Mulloony Resigns

Judge of Police Court Highly Complimented

Upon the receipt of his commission late yesterday as judge of the Police Court Alexander R. Mulloony tendered his resignation as assistant United States attorney for the District of Columbia, and subscribed to the oath of office as judge. The oath was administered by Chief Justice Clabaugh of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

United States Attorney Baker today addressed a communication to Judge Mulloony accepting with regret his resignation as an assistant, and saying many complimentary things of his able efforts in the past, and predicting for the new jurist a most useful and successful future.

Judge Mulloony will take the Police Court bench for the first time next Monday morning.

No steps have yet been taken by United States Attorney Baker to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Judge Mulloony as assistant United States attorney for the District of Columbia.
