Body Badly Mangled

Conductor Scala Falls to His Death From Cabin John Car

Edward J. Scala, twenty-four years old, conductor on the Cabin John line, met his death shortly after 8 o'clock last night when he lost his footing and slipped from the running board of a rapidly-moving westbound car, on Cabin John road near McCoy station. The conductor's body was badly mangled.

Conductor Scala had a new motorman on his car last night and about the time the car reached Foxhall road he went to the front platform and suggested that faster speed should be made, the police were told, and when he turned to return to the rear end of the car he missed his footing and fell.

Scala was unconscious when picked up and taken to Georgetown University Hospital. He died before reaching the hospital. Coroner Nevitt will hold an inquest at the morgue tomorrow morning. Scala resided at 320 12th street southeast.

Death Held Accidental

Coroner's Jury Gives Finding in Case of Alvin J. Scala

A verdict of accidental death was reached by a coroner's jury at an inquest held at the morgue today to investigate the death of Alvin J. Scala, conductor in the employ of the Washington Railway and Electric Company, who was killed on the Cabin John line Tuesday night.

Testimony given at the inquest was to the effect that Scala possibly missed his footing on the running board of his car and was struck by a trolley pole. While finding that Scala's death was the result of an accident the jury added that the close proximity of the trolley poles to the tracks on that line is a menace to the conductors.

Dress Parade of the Marines

The first parade of the marines since receiving their new uniform took place at the Garrison this morning, in the presence of a large number of ladies and gentlemen, who were highly pleased with the appearance and discipline of the battalion. The line was formed at 10 o'clock, the band and drum corps, under Prof. Scala and Drum Major Roche, taking the right, and the four companies, numbering nearly 400 men, marching into their places; after which they were reviewed by Brig. General Harris, commandant of the corps. The battalion was then marched around the ground several times, and were drawn up in line, where they went through the manual of arms in a style which they are celebrated for; the movements being done on the instant, and the men moving as if they were part of a complicated machine. The new uniform--consisting of dark-blue coats with heavy yellow epaulettes and orange trimmings, light-blue pants, and regulation caps with a large brass frontispiece and a pompon of the smallest size--had the effect of setting off the corps to a better advantage than with the old uniform. The officers appeared in their old uniform, having been disappointed in receiving their new ones.
